There are numerous forms of psychological ugliness. There is an ugliness of stupidity, for example, of unawareness (distressingly common among pretty women). An ugliness also of greed, of lasciviousness (strong sexual desires), of avarice (extreme desire for wealth). All the deadly sins, indeed, have their own peculiar negation of beauty. On the pretty faces of those especially who are trying to have a continuous good time, one sees very often a kind of bored sullenness (bad temper) that ruins all their charm. I remember in particular two young American girls I once met in North Africa. From the porcelain specialist's point of view, they were beautiful. But the sullen boredom of which I have spoken was so deeply stamped into their fresh faces, their gait (way of walking) and gestures so weary (tired or fatigued) a listlessness (weakness and slowness), that it was unbearable to look at them. These exquisite (extremely beautiful) creatures were positively repulsive (definitely horrible to look at).

- Describe the forms of psychological ugliness after the writer but in your words. (5)
- What does the writer say about pretty faces? (5)
- What is your idea of physical beauty? (5)
- What does the writer say about the beautiful American girls? (5)
- Suggest a suitable title for the passage. (2.5)
- Make a summary or précis of the passage in about one-third of its length and in your own words as far as possible. (2.5)

QUESTIONS WITH BRIEF ANSWERS

Q-4 Summarize the following Paragraph in your own words. Do not use more than 80 words (15)

Today there are 3000 million people in the world. Fifty years ago only about 2000 million people lived in it. If earth's population were evenly distributed over its land surface, there would be about 550 persons to the square mile. But Earth has vast areas of forest, mountains and desert which are almost totally inhabited. On the other hand, it has great cities each with millions of people living in a few square miles.

To feed the fast growing population of our earth, scientists and planners have to discover new ways to produce more. One possible way is to bring more land not under cultivation. This can be done only in places where there is lot of land not used for productive purposes. In many places there is no longer possible all the arable land is already cultivated. A second way is to make use of new types of seeds to produce more. Already a number of new strains of paddy and wheat have been developed in different parts of the world. Pakistan is one of the countries where a lot of useful work has been done in the field of agriculture research.

Q.4. Read the following passage and write short answer to the questions given below: 30

A certain hunter had found a piece of forest where there were plenty of animals to hunt. The only trouble was that the place was very difficult to get to. He returned from his first visit to the place in autumn, and could not get back until the snows melted in the following spring. Then (he went to a pilot of a small plane, who earned his living by carrying hunters over parts of the country where there were no roads and no railways. He asked him to take him back to his favourite piece of forest. The pilot told the hunter there was no where to land in the place he was talking about. "I thought you were a wonderful pilot," said the hunter. "Some of my friends said you could land a plane on a postage stamp." "That is right," said the pilot. When the hunter told the pilot that last spring another pilot took him to that place, he finally agreed to take him there. When they reached the place, the hunter pointed out a small spot without trees in the middle of the forest. It had a steep rise at one end. The pilot thought there was not enough space to land. But the hunter said that the other pilot landed in the same space, a year before. So down went the plane. When it came to the rise, it turned right over onto its back. The hunter smiled and said, "That is exactly how the other pilot managed it last time."

Q3: Make a Precis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title

(10)

The knowledge of salesmanship is of great value for everybody. It does not matter whether a man is going to be a doctor, a soldier, a lawyer, a teacher, or a businessman; he will start out as a salesman selling his knowledge, his training, and his personality. His future will depend mostly upon his salesmanship, and his ability to impress others favorably.

Mostly successful businessmen are good psychologists. They know and understand people, they have learnt how to get along with them. They have cultivated those positive qualities which draw out the same qualities in others. These qualities are: honesty, imagination, optimism, a willingness to serve and cooperate with others, a sincere interest in the welfare of others and a thorough knowledge of the product to be sold. These are the positive qualities which comprise true salesmanship. These are the qualities that make for success not only in business but also in the business of life.

Q4: Read the passage and answer the questions given below:

(10)

Trees give shade for the benefit of others and while they themselves stand in the sun and endure scorching heat, they produce the fruit by which others profit. The character of good men is like that of trees. What is the use of this perishable body, if no use of it is made for the benefit of mankind? Sandalwood—the more it is rubbed the more scent does it yield: Sugarcane—the more it is peeled and cut into pieces, the more juice does it produce. Gold — the more it is burnt, the more brightly does it shine. The men who are noble at heart do not lose these qualities even in losing their lives. What does it signify whether they die at this moment or whether their lives are prolonged? Happen what may, those who tread in the right path will not set foot in any other. Life itself is unprofitable to a man who does not live for others. To live for the mere sake of living one's life is to live the life of dogs and cows. Those who lay down their lives for the sake of friend or even for the sake of a stranger, will assuredly dwell forever in a world of bliss.

Questions:

- I. How do trees benefit mankind?
- II. The character of good men is being compared with what?
- III. When does life become unprofitable?
- IV. What happens to people who sacrifice for others?
- V. What is the benefit of sugarcane?
